Dear Dr. Lederberg:

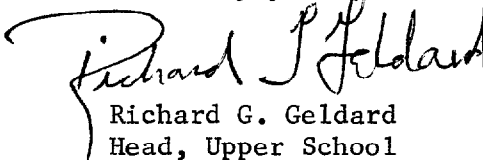

As David's Senior year draws to a close, I want to ask before you join the growing legion of "Former Parents," if you will consider writing an article for our spring number. As it happens, the issue will have a scientific bent with articles from Rosalyn Yalow and Robert Serber. Dr. Yalow spoke in the Adams series and Dr. Serber is a parent. Both are writing from the perspective of informed scientists to the lay public on technical issues.

I have enclosed our last Review, which, as you can see, was a special issue devoted to the Middle East. The spring issue will be "open" in that other than scientific articles will appear, but a theme may well emerge. I realize that time presses and that deadlines are difficult, but we would need a manuscript no later than March 25 in order to be out in the middle of May.

David seems to have survived the college hunt with a minimum of trauma, even a positive sense of himself as he completed the process. Indeed, very little of a crisis nature showed itself here at school as he made his deadlines and narrowed his choices. He should have several wonderful options.

Again, I hope you will be able to write something for us and will look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Richard G. Geldard
